Training Methodology

Managers today often find themselves balancing the need to get the job done quickly, perhaps with fewer people, and to build working relationships that span barriers of time, distance, and culture, to name just a few. For many managers, this unfamiliar territory requires a new way of thinking about leading people.

The course builds skills in two areas vital to the success of a virtual team: distance management and team leadership. By combining theory with experiential exercises, participants develop the skills required to meet the demands of the constantly changing global work environment.

This course will provide a variety of proven adult learning techniques to ensure maximum understanding, comprehension, and retention of the information presented. This includes highly interactive exercises, case studies, and targeted videos relevant to the topic. This will be reinforced through active facilitation, group dialogue and feedback throughout. In addition, a Leadership Profile Assessment will be used to showcase the individual's leadership style, with 1-2-1 constructive development feedback provided by the course facilitator.

Summary

COVID-19 has introduced the challenges of virtual working, where team connection and productivity are not guaranteed. While virtual teams offer benefits, they risk misalignment and reduced collaboration, affecting trust and engagement. Building a successful virtual team requires trust, clear communication, and knowledge-sharing, especially due to limited in-person interaction.

Virtual teams can benefit both remote workers and employers if challenges are managed. Success starts with selecting the right team members and fostering open communication in a trusting environment. The first 30 days are crucial for setting team traditions. As 70% of professionals anticipate increased use of online collaboration, integrating technology is essential for thriving virtual teams.
