- Delegate tasks accordingly based on business needs and employee skillset.
- Inspire and motivate individuals and teams to reach their maximum potential.
 - Set realistic goals and objectives for projects.
 - Develop a strong and effective communication style.
- Provide coaching to weaker performing employees and encourage improvement.
 - Identify a personal leadership style.
- Review different styles of mentorship and find some that resonate personally.
 - Lead a team with passion and dedication.
- Recognise personal strengths and weaknesses and work to improve them.

Audience

This course is designed for anyone who has taken on a new supervisory role, or those currently in a leadership role who aspire to learn and develop their skills. It would be most beneficial for:

- Team Leaders

- Sales Managers
- Project Managers
- Department Supervisors
- Training and Development Managers
- Site Supervisors
- HR Personnel
- Marketing Managers
- Senior Executives

Training Methodology

This course uses a variety of adult learning styles to aid full understanding and comprehension. Participants will review case studies of established leaders to highlight areas where they apply particular skills or methods that may contribute to their success.

Through learning exercises, participants will analyse the examples given to look for certain skills, communication styles, and coaching methods that they believe to be effective. In group activities and role-playing scenarios, they will be allowed to demonstrate the learned skills and develop their communication style. Participants will then provide feedback to one another to offer them more perspective on their abilities. This allows for a full and comprehensive understanding of the taught content.

Summary

Many factors contribute to business success. One important factor is efficient management.

An effective supervisor is crucial to maintaining employee productivity. A supervisor must take on the responsibility of ensuring a positive working environment that encourages passion and dedication in all employees from the top down.

For this to be done effectively, supervisors must have a strong, yet empathetic voice when communicating with team members and operate an open-door policy that encourages and empowers the workforce. Conflict and challenges will likely arise within the team and a supervisor with powerful language skills will be more able to resolve these issues. A leader's style and energy will reflect all throughout their employees and will have a heavy influence on their productivity.

Not only are communication skills important, but practical skills are essential. Supervisors need to be competent in managerial duties and have the physical skills that may accompany their role. Planning, setting objectives, and monitoring performance are vital tasks conducted by supervisors to ensure employees are working to meet business needs and industry standards.
